Dear Judge Vassar,

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) is responsible for a number of environmental statutes passed by Congress, many of which directly affect local communities, such as Bristow, Oklahoma.

Under the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act (commonly known as Superfund), EPA is responsible for locating, assessing and cleaning up uncontrolled or abandoned hazardous waste sites. The EPA is proposing several additions to the National Priorities List which is the list of Federal Superfund sites. One of these proposed sites is the Wilcox Oil Refinery Site Located in Creek County, Oklahoma.
